The Brisbane River is a defining feature of our city and lies at the heart of our evolving cultural identity. Over time, waterfronts once dominated by industry have transformed into vibrant riverside communities and are now home to our most-loved galleries and cultural destinations.

It is vital for our economy that Brisbane continues to emerge as a vibrant and creative city to attract creative industries and enterprises. In 2013 and 2014, Council’s River’s Edge Strategy and Brisbane City Centre Master Plan 2014 were developed with input from the community. These strategies identify public and community art outcomes as priorities in fostering creativity and innovation.

Brisbane’s growing urban population and increasing visitor numbers have resulted in an emerging desire for art and cultural expression. As more key riverside precincts are redeveloped, there is further opportunity to enhance publicly accessible spaces and build a public art collection that is diverse and available to all.

The River Art Framework presents a vision for a world-class collection of public art along the river’s edge that will provide an outdoor gallery experience and draw people to the river to be inspired. The vision will be realised through partnerships between government, business and the community that deliver a changing program of cultural events and experiences and contribute additional visual art pieces to Brisbane’s permanent collection.

Together, we can work to enhance the Brisbane River as a destination for visual arts and cultural experiences.
OVERVIEW

Brisbane’s River Art Framework sets the stage for the ongoing transformation of Brisbane’s riverfront into a world-class cultural destination and canvas for artistic expression.

Over the next 10 years, Brisbane’s inner-city riverfront will benefit from considerable investment and public realm revitalisation. This presents a unique opportunity for government, business and the community to work together to deliver an outdoor gallery of public art that inspires, celebrates and enriches our city.

The River Art Framework will provide the blueprint for a connected series of public artworks and cultural experiences along the inner-city reaches of the Brisbane River. A number of exciting opportunities are outlined in the framework, including temporary public art events, the continued expansion of the permanent public art collection and supporting improvements to riverside spaces.

The framework includes:
» a review of existing land use, constraints and opportunities
» key principles to guide the future commissioning of public art along the river
» a curatorial framework which identifies the key themes and stories to inform future art commissions
» transformative projects and recommendations for a feasible and achievable five year action plan
» recommendations for potential partnerships and a cooperative approach with the corporate sector and key institutions along the river.
PART 1 STRATEGIC FRAMEWORK VISION

Visual art will play a central role in the creation of a sophisticated and innovative public realm that distinguishes Brisbane as the creative heart of the Asia Pacific.

Council will work together with government, business and the arts community to initiate public art outcomes along the river’s edge that inspire and celebrate our city.

STRATEGIC CONTEXT

A case for investment in public art along the inner-city reaches of the Brisbane River

The River Art Framework builds on the intent of Council’s broader policy framework and existing public art policy and delivery mechanisms.

Council’s Brisbane City Centre Master Plan 2014 and the 2013 River’s Edge Strategy highlight the need to reinforce the Brisbane River as a world-class cultural destination. These strategies and other components of the policy framework, such as the Creative Brisbane Creative Economy 2013-22 strategy, also identify the opportunity for coordinated riverside public art outcomes.

The River Art Framework harnesses opportunities for diverse visual arts experiences that are engaging and inclusive for locals and visitors. Public art should appeal to broad sections of the community by using a variety of artforms and mediums that embrace both traditional and contemporary approaches.

ART AND THE CULTURAL ECONOMY

The Queensland Art Gallery and Gallery of Modern Art (QAGOMA) have presented major exhibitions such as the Asia Pacific Triennial of Contemporary Art (APT), the only major exhibition in the world to focus on the contemporary art of Asia, Australia and the Pacific.

Since its inception in 1993, the APT has drawn combined audiences of more than three million people. The Queensland Government has estimated that the seventh APT alone generated almost $27 million for the Queensland economy.*

Building on this momentum, the River Art Framework can facilitate further economic and social benefits to the city and allow residents and visitors to experience the city’s rich and diverse contemporary culture.

The River Art Framework will:

» contribute to Brisbane’s domestic and international visitor economy
» increase cultural tourism and investment in tourism infrastructure
» enhance Brisbane’s cultural profile, attracting more conventions, events, cultural initiatives and tourism ventures
» revitalise Brisbane’s cultural scene and stimulate local interest and the local economy.

*Queensland Government Media Statement, August 27, 2013
The River Art Framework will strengthen the foundation of Brisbane’s creative economy.

As Queensland’s capital, Brisbane’s visitor economy is underpinned by a strong corporate market. With the emergence of growing leisure markets, particularly from China and Asia, the city’s popularity is increasing rapidly.

Looking ahead, Brisbane is aiming to double visitor expenditure by 2020, and consolidate its status as a New World City renowned for ambition, lifestyle, socially-inclusive technology, and a friendly, engaging, and talented population.

In 2014 Lonely Planet positioned Brisbane as “arguably Australia’s hippest city”, an “energetic river town on the way up, with an edgy arts scene, pumping nightlife, great coffee and restaurants”.

There is an opportunity to build on Brisbane’s emerging reputation as an up and coming cultural destination.

The River Art Framework will work alongside other tourism initiatives to achieve the goals of the Brisbane Visitor Economy Strategy: A Destination Tourism Plan for Brisbane 2014-2020.

Define Brisbane as a tourism industry leader and New World City.*

Generate 80,000 tourism-related jobs.*

Help attract an additional 1.75 million domestic and international visitors by 2020.*

Understanding and acknowledging the incredible economic impact of the nonprofit arts and culture, we must always remember their fundamental value.

They foster beauty, creativity, originality, and vitality. The arts inspire us, soothe us, provoke us, involve us, and connect us. But they also create jobs and contribute to the economy.

Robert L. Lynch
President and CEO Americans for the Arts

*Brisbane Visitor Economy Strategy: A Destination Tourism Plan for Brisbane 2014-2020
Cultural tourism is about experiencing the arts, as well as the heritage and character of a place.

The Brisbane River is fundamental to the identity of the land’s traditional owners and broader community. It also determined the city’s location when Europeans first arrived. The river is now central to Brisbane’s tourism identity.

Of the six million annual passengers that use Brisbane’s ferry network, 2.4 million are recreational users. River trips provide spectacular views and easy access to the city’s attractions, businesses and event spaces. River artworks will add to the experience of these journeys, draw more cultural visitors and facilitate greater visitation to other river attractions.

Approximately 53% of Brisbane’s international visitors participate in cultural and heritage activities. On average, international cultural tourists stay 30% longer and spend 27% more per trip than other international visitors, while domestic cultural visitors stay 35% longer and spend 51% more per trip than other domestic visitors.*

Other global cities have demonstrated the appeal of art and culture for tourists. In Austin, where the ‘Art in Public Places’ program was established in 1985, 69% of non-residents reported art and cultural events as the primary reason for their trip. Vienna has a long-standing art, musical and cultural tradition and 67% of visitors stated they are drawn by art and culture.*

Culture adds a tremendous value to a city. Very often that value is monetary, in terms of both cultural experiences as well as the effects on the surrounding areas... but that value goes even deeper than that; it defines us as an inclusive and innovative city.

World Cities Culture Report 2015

*Arts Nation - An Overview of Australian Arts, 2015 Edition (Australia Council for the Arts)
Cultural tourism plays a role in global engagement, developing a city’s international image and reputation. This effect is immeasurable, far-reaching and long-term.

In 2014, Brisbane hosted the G20 Leaders’ Summit, highlighting the city’s cosmopolitan outlook. The city subsequently received one million annual international visitors for the first time and a record high expenditure of $1.8 billion. The Queensland Government also invested in a one-off supporting art and cultural program.

The benefits of a recurring art and cultural program are significant. In just four years, Perth’s Fringe World Festival attracted 600,000 visitors annually and injected more than $70 million into the city’s economy, value adding $51.73 for every $1 of state funding.* There is potential for the River Art Framework and supporting venues, events and attractions to leverage comparable results.

The River Art Framework will increase the appeal of Brisbane’s cultural precinct (a concentration of cultural, educational, retail and recreational facilities on the river’s edge) that attracts more than 13 million visitors annually. As Brisbane evolves, there is a need to draw the threads of the cultural precinct out into adjoining areas and expand the cultural landscape.

Public art is a key way to expand the cultural precinct and draw people into other riverside areas.

A revitalised cultural scene will stimulate the local economy and turn neighbourhoods into places of interest, supporting local commerce, job growth and property values.

Brisbane’s residents have an enviable quality of life and benefit from a subtropical climate and outdoor lifestyle that creates an ideal situation for a rich public art experience.

The River Art Framework can mobilise riverside residential communities, encouraging local enjoyment and fostering pride and greater engagement in local issues.

Grow and celebrate a festival destination.

…public art can resonate with the audience it serves and is why smart cities keep investing in the arts. The bottom line is the arts and culture of a city draws people in and has the potential to turn a city from a stop-over to a destination.

Brooke Boland
Artshub June 2016
Brisbane’s growing cultural identity will build on the success of the established South Brisbane cultural precinct to create an expanded sequence of public art experiences along the river’s edge.

An emerging collection of public art along the river’s edge provides a strong foundation upon which to expand the cultural experience. The public art collection will draw people out beyond the central core of the city centre and cultural precinct to create an engaging and diverse sequence of permanent and temporary art.

The existing physical landscape of the river’s edge provides an abundance of potential locations for future public artwork opportunities, extending from the University of Queensland and Dutton Park, downstream through to the CBD, and on the former Bulimba Barracks site.

Walkability and connections through and between proposed precincts, combined with the provision of a clear and distinct palette of urban materials, will assist with legibility and wayfinding. Easy navigation for visitors will contribute to the success of these public art precincts.
There is opportunity to increase activation and utilisation of the Brisbane River and its edges through a series of river rooms, each with their own identity and purpose.

The Brisbane River will be an art and cultural activity hub, enhanced by public art and cultural experiences in adjoining tourism and cultural destinations, open spaces and CityCat stops along the river’s edge.

Within the River Art Framework lies the opportunity to deliver public art in a considered and curated way, harnessing opportunities from the natural and built conditions of each site and emphasising the collective character of the local area.

Distinct precincts, or reaches along the river defined as a series of River Rooms (refer to adjoining map), will provide the framework for the delivery of a diverse program of public art.
KEY PRINCIPLES

Five underlying principles will build on the directions of existing Council policy to serve as the basis for the River Art Framework.

The five principles will serve as a foundation for future art initiatives along the river and will guide efforts to integrate art into a range of implementation projects and programs.

The principles are intended to inform both partnerships and delivery outcomes as Council works together with the broader arts community to elevate the river’s edge as a cultural destination.

COURAGE AND LEADERSHIP

Development of an outstanding public art program calls for courage and leadership.

RIVER CELEBRATION

Celebrating the Brisbane River as the heart of the city and a canvas for artistic expression.

COLLABORATION

Art and experiences built with a range of partners, art institutions, local communities, existing festivals and events.

DIVERSE EXPERIENCES

A city where artists are encouraged to experiment and create new art experiences.

COMPREHENSIVE REVITALISATION

A whole-of-the-river’s edge approach for high cultural impact.

E
PRINCIPLE 1

Development of an outstanding public art framework calls for courage and leadership.

COURAGE AND LEADERSHIP

A strong competitive environment between global cities requires dedication to original and engaging outcomes. A New World City needs a unique approach and commitment to an ongoing dynamic program.

Brisbane has the opportunity to create a truly distinct public art collection integrated with the river. Ongoing leadership will help deliver outcomes that reflect local identity while delivering to an international standard. Realising the River Art Framework requires firm commitment to high-quality public art that reinforces an authentic sense of place.

PRINCIPLE 2

Advancing our cultural relationship with the river as the heart of the city and a canvas for artistic expression.

RIVER CELEBRATION

The river is a key focus for leisure and tourism activities and will increasingly be used as an outdoor gallery and as a setting for cultural events.

Small to large-scale interventions and a range of temporary art and cultural experiences will draw people to the river and create an inviting tourist attraction. Through sensitive planning, these artistic and cultural interventions with the river will reflect, interact and integrate with natural rhythms such as tidal changes and floods.

Cloud Gate by Anish Kapoor is the centerpiece of AT&T Plaza at Millennium Park in Chicago. The artwork cost $23 million with all funding from donations from individuals and corporations.

OY/YO by Deborah Kass, Brooklyn Bridge Park New York City.
The success of the River Art Framework will be enhanced through partnerships that foster stakeholder ownership and engagement, and facilitate art and cultural outcomes in both public and private spaces.

Partnerships that deliver and fund the recommended projects will ensure a sustained arts focus and support the growing reputation of the river as a cultural destination.

To plan for a consistent and high-quality cultural impact, it is critical that the entire river’s edge is included.

Development of privately owned spaces, infrastructure projects and other renewal initiatives along the river should integrate public art early in the planning and design process. Public art should be prioritised when developing or reviewing any master plan for sites adjoining the river. Support will be given to public art concepts that use underutilised river spaces in an original and integrated way.

Urban renewal and redevelopment projects present an opportunity to establish visual connections between key inner-city locations and the river. Artworks should be integrated with key catalyst sites and building programs, enhancing architecture, wayfinding, amenity and sense of place.
PRINCIPLE 5

A creative city inspires and provides opportunities for artists to experiment and create new art experiences.

DIVERSE EXPERIENCES

Art and cultural experiences will serve a broad audience. The mix of art interventions from the River Art Framework will range from temporary to permanent works, encompassing bold and subtle designs.

The river art experience will provide a mix of visual art mediums that stimulate a range of responses. The aim is for residents and visitors to engage with art through diverse interfaces, including experiences of varying durations and interventions that engage the senses.

In increasingly busy cities, art and culture can succeed where other public policy has failed. It plays a powerful and sophisticated role in building good relations between diverse groups: between established residents and new immigrants or between the haves and the have nots.

World Cities Culture Report 2015
Successful commissioned public art responds to its specific environment in both a physical and thematic sense.

The purpose of a curatorial framework such as the River Art Framework is to set the themes to which artists are expected to respond. A curatorial framework is not intended to be prescriptive, rather it provides guidance as to what themes are sought to be reflected through public art, thereby ensuring an integrated response by artists.
Artwork that responds to the river’s edge will place it at the heart of Brisbane life and at the forefront of public consciousness.

Great inner-city and river-based public art will enhance the river’s unique identity. Public art that responds to the character of the river will contribute to its sense of place and elevate the connection of land and water for locals, visitors and tourists.

Iconic, interpretive, temporary and landmark works and events will create diverse cultural elements of discovery and delight, which will assert the river’s reputation as a renowned creative place.

The cultural journey of the river will be punctuated by key points of engagement.

River rooms are not exclusive sites for public art but are precincts where there is a greater concentration of curated art, events or performance spaces. These rooms will provide easily walkable river loops punctuated by art and cultural experiences.

Over time, river rooms will offer many layers of experience. Permanent public art, short-term ‘pop up’ activations, events in unexpected locations, projected art with changing imagery, river installations and temporary or ephemeral works will be available on or adjoining the river.

Innovation and the use of new technology by artists will contribute to a 24-hour aesthetic.

24/7 ART

When creating art and cultural concepts, creative practitioners should consider the impact and reach of their work after the sun sets. A global city provides 24-hour activity, and an international cultural audience in particular anticipates vibrant art experiences during the evening and night-time hours.

Building on Council’s ‘City of Lights’ initiative, buildings, bridges, parks and other sites along the river will be the canvas for lighting and projection artworks. Creative platforms and the use of new technology in art will provide unique and memorable art experiences.

A New World City with a distinctive identity promotes its past, present and future.

THEME 3

THEME 4

INDIGENOUS STORIES

Aboriginal people inhabited the shores of the Brisbane River for up to 40,000 years, where the river was an abundant food source and an important location for spiritual and recreational purposes. Indigenous stories of the past, present and future have a powerful and important influence on the identity of our city. These stories should have a tangible presence in the public domain.

Ship to Shore by Matthew Harding is a series of ‘rope knot’ forms inspired by the maritime history of Newcastle’s foreshore, fabricated from stainless steel, LED and fibre optics and designed to act as a playful and interactive setting.

The Weight of History, The Mark of Time by Brook Andrew sits within a giant, cavernous space reserved for cultural activities inside the Barangaroo development now taking shape on the western edge of the Sydney CBD.
THEME 5

ASIA PACIFIC CONNECTION

Brisbane’s place at the centre of the Asia Pacific region has resulted in a unique regional partnership and transfer of creative ideas.

Brisbane has a growing importance as a gateway for business and culture to the Asia Pacific region. New ideas and talent abound in the city as a result of more people coming to study, live or work in Brisbane.

A rich and vibrant culture becomes a source of economic success. Asia Pacific themed permanent and temporary art commissions that respond to the river can reflect the cultural engagement and exchange within this region.

Lingua by Jim Sanborn is one of two art pieces located in the Walter E. Washington Convention Center. The two columns represent in eight languages words and phrases recalling historic gathering of people from 1400BC until the 19th century.

THEME 6

INDUSTRIAL HERITAGE

Brisbane’s progress and development has always been entwined with the river.

Brisbane’s colonial history is intimately connected with the river and there are still reminders of the industrial activities that once lined the river banks.

Artists have the opportunity to attract attention to the river’s unique industrial heritage by integrating historic elements and narratives of the river through an array of contemporary mediums.

Through art, locals, visitors and tourists can engage with the river’s past and gain a greater appreciation of its important place in Brisbane life.

Street artists Pixel Pancho and Vhils combined their styles to paint a mural located in Lisbon, Portugal.
PART 2 DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

Implementation of the River Art Framework over an initial period of five years will deliver an impactful and memorable series of visually stimulating artworks and events. This cohesive and complimentary series of unique projects will activate and enhance the river experience for residents and visitors.

A diverse mix of demonstration projects has been carefully considered to appeal to a wide audience. These initial ideas are envisaged as a starting point for other initiatives that emerge through the creative community. The River Art Framework is a program for all people – young children and their families, young adults, the elderly, city workers and visitors to Brisbane.

Establishing a meaningful collection of public art as part of the river experience requires partnerships between government, business and other stakeholders. It is through these partnerships that an important visual art experience will be consolidated along the river and will endure into the future.

Launching the program and communicating individual projects to the public in a timely manner will be key to the program’s success. Benefits of the River Art Framework should be highlighted in communications to help people appreciate the immense value of arts and culture to a city.
DEMONSTRATION PROJECT 1

RIVER ICONS

Iconic public art becomes an identifiable attractor for visitors, cultural tourists and the international market.

River icons are landmark public art commissions by high-profile Australian and international artists in partnership with business and government. These artworks might feature on the river’s edge, in the water or designed with water as a medium.

Rationale
Iconic art refers to highly original, influential or unique works of art. Such artworks are well-established and widely celebrated in popular culture, becoming recognisable elements of a city’s identity. A budget of substance is required to ensure these works are visually dominant along the river’s edge and hold lasting landmark value. Iconic artworks are also indicators of a New World City, punctuating the public art river journey and setting the standard of quality and originality for future public art.

Target audience
Residents of Brisbane will have ownership of iconic artwork experiences, but international visitors and cultural tourists are the key audience for these works. Iconic artworks will advance Brisbane’s international reputation as a city that is enriched through its cultural connections to the river.

Benefits
- Iconic artworks significantly contribute to a city’s identity.
- On a world stage, iconic artworks become an important reason for visiting a place.
- Images of unique public artworks on social media have a strong influence on the attraction of a destination as travellers seek out unique features in the places they visit.

BOTTOM RIGHT: Wonderland by Jaume Plensa is located in front of the Bow office tower in Calgary, Alberta Canada.

INDIGENOUS SHOWCASE

Indigenous showcases are permanent public artworks by the finest Indigenous Australian artists. These works will transform bridge sites and high-profile river sites. Collaborations between emerging and established indigenous artists will support capacity building.

Rationale
The strength of Indigenous art has been reflected in the number of significant exhibitions held by GOMA in recent years. These exhibitions demonstrate the diverse practice of Queensland’s Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander artists. Indigenous showcases will enable Indigenous artists to tell their stories in a contemporary medium that integrates and responds to the river.

Target audience
As this initiative provides an opportunity for Brisbane to celebrate and reflect on its Indigenous heritage, an important target audience is Brisbane residents. A showcase of works from local Indigenous Australian artists will also distinguish Brisbane from other cities and attract interstate and international visitors.

Benefits
» A New World City with a distinctive character promotes its past and present and builds a genuine and comprehensive city identity.
» Queensland’s Indigenous artists are a great thematic strength and significantly contribute to a cultural point of difference for Brisbane.

DEMONSTRATION PROJECT 3

BOTANICA

Rationale

Brisbane’s subtropical climate and lush flora are part of the city’s distinctiveness. The City Botanic Gardens is the city’s oldest park, planted by convicts in 1825 with food crops to feed the prison colony. These gardens include ancient trees and exotic species and provide a tranquil green haven.

Botanica will feature temporary artworks by Australian and international artists, creatively installed within diverse garden spaces – suspended in trees, integrated within garden beds and incorporated in ground and water based installations.

Target audience

Like other leading visual art events in Sydney (Sculpture by the Sea) and Melbourne (White Night), Botanica will be an inclusive event aimed at a broad target audience. As the event grows and develops, it has the potential to attract significant interstate and international visitors.

Benefits

» Draw attention to and increase use of the City Botanic Gardens by locals and visitors.
» Temporary art forms by Australian and international artists as part of this event will raise the profile of Brisbane as an international and national cultural destination.

METAMORPHOSIS

Metamorphosis incorporates a program of urban artworks and cultural events on the river’s edge. Emerging local artists and high profile Australian and international artists can create temporary, semi-permanent and permanent visual art, and curators can stage cultural events to beautify and activate key locations along the river.

Rationale

Dynamic spaces that include high-impact street art, light installations and art and cultural events provide a cost effective and accessible way to leave a lasting creative impact. These art forms also appeal to youth. Creative Brisbane Creative Economy 2013-22 highlights the need for Brisbane to retain young creatives.

Target audience

Cyclists and pedestrians accessing the pathways along the river will have an up-close experience of these works. CityCat users, including interstate and international tourists, might take a ferry to view artworks from the river or easily visit events. Brisbane’s residents will also benefit in seeing their riverside spaces transformed and uplifted.

Benefits

- Young creative people are given an exciting opportunity for creative expression and connection.
- Unique temporary, semi-permanent and permanent artforms and events will raise the international cultural profile of Brisbane and encourage locals to visit river spaces.
- Underutilised spaces are transformed into vibrant places.
- Cost-effective and high impact.

Artplay is an annual rotating program of child-centred visual and performing art events in suburban riverside parks.

Rationale
A core focus of other projects in the River Art Framework is to attract visitors to Brisbane. However, Artplay is largely designed to increase cultural participation of Brisbane’s youngest residents (and future artists) as well as activating underutilised river’s edge spaces.

Artplay is a series of events with a curated troupe of professional artists delivering a unique program of high-quality outdoor visual and performing art experiences, specifically designed for children.

Target audience
Young children (2-10 year olds) and their families will be able to actively participate in and contribute to Brisbane’s art and cultural experiences. Artplay has the potential to become a valued and anticipated annual event for families living in the riverside suburbs of Brisbane.

Benefits
- Small-to-large-scale interventions and a range of temporary experiences including on-water events will attract families and draw people to connect with the river.
- The increased cultural participation of Brisbane’s youngest residents.
- Activation of underutilised river’s edge spaces.

PLAY OF LIGHT

Contemporary light artworks will illuminate and transform land and water sites along the river.

Play of light is an annual program of semi-permanent lighting and projection artworks by renowned Australian and international artists. Artists will design site specific artworks to be located on and around the river. There is the potential to do projections from ferry terminals onto nearby buildings, structures or vegetation.

Rationale

Creative platforms and the use of new technology in art will provide unique and memorable art experiences. This project creates an annual program of temporary lighting artwork installations and projections to illuminate sites along the river on land and water and including bridges and other structures. These artworks would be created by experienced Australian and international artists working with light as a medium.

Target audience

This project has the potential to become a major recurrent tourist attraction and is targeted at an audience of tourists and visitors to Brisbane.

Benefits

» Using new technology in art will provide memorable and innovative art experiences and advance Brisbane as a modern metropolis.

Important next steps in the development and implementation of the River Art Framework include:

Funding
A firm commitment by Council to contribute to the funding of the inaugural Botanica contemporary art exhibition as the first priority of the River Art Framework.

Botanica 2018 will run in conjunction with Festival 2018, a city-wide celebration for the XXI Commonwealth Games, produced by Brisbane City Council and supported by the Queensland Government.

Partnerships
Partnerships with business and institutions are fundamental to the implementation of the River Art Framework. Negotiation and agreement of shared costs and responsibilities is key to realising these projects.

Delivery
To ensure high quality visual art outcomes, it is recommended that each project team includes experienced visual art professionals. A project team may include Council staff, partner employees, business and/or specialist public art and/or event consultants.
